Contextualisation

The subject aims to teach the students:

- How with humanity, and with dexterity, to manipulate animals for research purposes, using the common techniques in animal research work in an official animal house.
- To apply the national and international bioethics guidelines in the use of animals in research.
- To know the methodologies for experimental research designs using animal models.

Important notes: this subject has very limited vacancies, so the interested students must consult the director of the Master (Dr. Ana M. Rodríguez) before enrolling in this subject. Moreover, the interested students must take into account that this subject requires the students to go to the animal house in the URV (Tarragona-Reus) for 1 week (practical training), so the students have to move to another province for the practical training.
